WILLIE MITCHELL, et al.

DRAFT

Criminal No. AMD-04-029

AFFIRMATION OF JUDGE ROGER BROWN

1. I have been a Judge of the Circuit Court for Baltimore City since 1946 [87?]. In 2002, I retired and assumed senior status [?]. I still try cases by designation.

2. Prior to becoming a Circuit Court Judge, I was a Judge in the District Court of Baltimore City from 1985 to 1987.

3. Over my years on the bench, I have signed many writs for detectives to take prisoners out of the places where they are incarcerated for purposes of interviewing them. I have done this on a routine basis for years and know that my colleagues on the Baltimore City Circuit Court bench have done so also. I assume that, since the prisoners are in custody, the detectives give them Miranda warnings. I am aware of no legal or constitutional problem with signing a writ for detectives to interview a prisoner and consider it a routine part of my function as a judge to further police investigations in this way. I am unaware of any legal challenge to the practice of issuing writs for police interviews during my years on the bench.

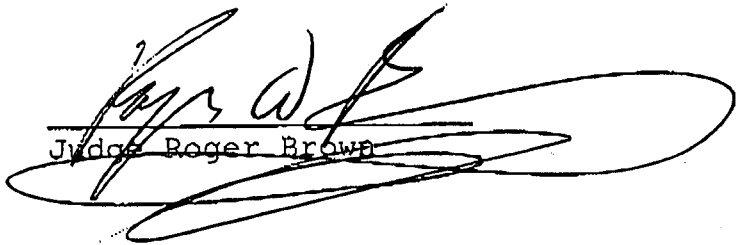

4. The copy of the writ attached as Ex. A is typical of the writs that I and other judges have issued.

5. I am familiar with the Circuit Court Clerk's Office's practice of issuing "true test" copies of writs. The Clerk knows the writ has been signed by examining the original writ. However, the clerk signs the "true test" copy in the judge's name, and only the copy leaves the courthouse. This practice was instituted by the Court many years ago, before I was on the bench, to impede forgery of judges' correct signatures.
